THE PINK KIMONO

By IZOLA FORRESTER

Copyright, 1906, by R by Douglas

It lay on the massive settee in the hall, an innocent looking parcel, flat and somewhat square. Three of Warwick's letters lay on top of it, neatly, as the hall boy had placed them, also his weekly paper from home.

Warwick glanced at the letters, again at the clock, tossed off his hat, coat and gloves and carried the whole lot, parcel, letters and paper, into the comfortable study and dropped into a deep chair.

There was an hour before the crowd would arrive. Everything was ready. The spread would be sent up at 8:30 sharp. He hoped Stanton would be able to get away. He liked Stanton. The boy needed a good friendly grip just now. He knew himself what it was to be in New York a stranger. Money could not give one the password that admitted one to the inside of things, the "getting next to the itness of all," as Stanton said. And if the right path did not open, and one happened to be lonely, there were others wide and welcoming. Warwick knew.

The boy was young and clever. The only thing that ailed him was too much money, and the confidence he had therein. He was a bit handy with it all—the whirl and the swing and the chance for big success. Warwick had kept an eye on him for weeks, measuring and judging him, and now he was satisfied. All the boy needed was direction and a cool hand checking him now and then, and he would win out.

Warwick opened the weekly paper from home and smiled to himself at the familiar heading, the Weekly Visitor. Ever since he could remember the Weekly Visitor had visited regularly at the quiet, big gray house that crowned Warwick's hill, up in Hillsboro, N. H. And Stanton was from the country, too, some place out west, out in Nebraska. He wondered if he had a weekly paper, too, to keep him in touch with the old world, and the ethics and standards of something besides New York.

The letters were unimportant. He took up the parcel and slipped off the cord. Laundry probably. He had not ordered anything.

The paper fell to the floor and he sat staring at the thing in his hands. It was a pink, delicate, shimmering, silken thing. He stood up and shook it out to its full length. It reached to the floor. It was not a bath robe. It could not possibly be a smoking jacket. It was a woman's garment, unmistakably.

The texture was the softest Japanese crape, the silk interwoven around the sleeves and neck in a border of golden butterflies. There was no mark on it nor on the paper. Warwick looked carefully.

The door bell buzzed imperatively, once, twice and a long one. That was Billy Trainor's ring. Warwick hesitated, cast the pink silk thing behind him on the chair and opened the door.

Billy stepped in smilingly, interrogatively looked about the room and spied the pink silk thing.

"Rex," he said reproachfully; "why, Rex!"

"It was left here by mistake," said Warwick hastily. "The hall boy did it. What is it?"

Billy lifted it by the shoulders and beamed with the appreciative eye of a connoisseur.

"It's a kimono, the real imported article. No bargain sale. Who's the lucky lady?"

The door bell buzzed again. Warwick took the kimono with deliberate forethought, went to the wardrobe in his dressing room and concealed it therein.

"It's Stanton," Billy announced, "and the rest."

Warwick played the host with more inner discomfort than ever before in his life. It was not the mere fact of the mistake that troubled him, nor that he minded the boys knowing of it, but he didn't want to see that particular—what had Billy called it?—kimono?—handled and laughed about and speculated over. Somewhere there must be the girl who wanted that kimono. He hoped she was a brunette. Pink was best for brunettes. Not too much of a brunette, perhaps with blue eyes, or gray—yes, gray—a gray eye or so.

Billy was pushing back the chairs and taborets for the spread. Stanton was singing at the piano. Out in the kitchenette Yates and Rogers and the Danforths were rummaging for dishes and knives and forks. Big De Veau was up on the divan with its rat Turkish cover draped picturesquely about him, reciting some original poetry.

"Rex, don't you own a decent tablecloth, you beggar?" called Yates.

Warwick smoked without replying. Through the haze he saw the brunette girl with the pink kimono about her smiling deliciously like a geisha—no, he didn't want her to be a geisha—smiling, well, just as a girl should smile when she had the right one to smile at.

Stanton left the piano and came over.

"Say, you're a prince to get me here tonight," he said. "I didn't know you had a place like this. Beats hotels, doesn't it? What do you call it?"

"Studio apartment," said Warwick, lazily. "Half den, half home, not confined to bachelors. I like it. When a fellow's had a home, it always sticks to him a bit. There's a Jap comes in and cleans up for me, and if I want a meal, I can have it."

"I—I am going to housekeeping too," began Stanton awkwardly.

"Honeymoon?" Warwick's eyes lighted with amusement. He had not dreamed the boy had gone so far.

"No, not as bad as that," Stanton hesitated, glancing at the joyous, riotous crowd about the piano. "It's my sister. Mother's sent her on to take care of me until she can come herself. I guess they didn't get very good accounts of their little boy in Manhattan. But I wrote home and told them about you and what sort of a chap you were and how you had taken me under your wing, and I promised to cut out the hotel and—well, a whole lot of things mother didn't like the flavor of, and today"—

"Whoopee!" yelled Yates from the dressing room. "I've found Warry's tablecloth. It's a dream!"

Warwick sat up and dropped his cigarette. Waltzing dizzily, radiantly, wickedly out from the dressing room came Yates, arrayed in the pink silk kimono. There was a silence, then a long drawn howl of delight from the crowd. They caught Yates in their arms, and swept him up on the center table. They handed him a Samoan fan of dyed plumes and a Mexican peaked hat. Trainor at the piano crashed into the "San Toy" overture. And suddenly Warwick stood up, white and mad, mad clear through that they should dare even in jest to touch anything that belonged to the dear, unknown girl, the brunette with the gray eyes.

"Take that off!" he said.

The music stopped short, but not from his words. Every face in the crowd was turned toward the door of the hall, and Yates looked helpless and miserable. Warwick turned, too, and held his breath. She stood in the doorway, one hand lifting aside the heavy drapery. Behind her was George, the colored hall boy. Her face looked startled, and yet there was amusement, too, in the wide gray eyes, as they glanced from face to face and finally rested on Yates.

"There is some mistake, I think," she said gently. "George tells me a parcel of mine was left here tonight. I have only moved here today, and he made a mistake. I think that gentleman has on my kimono."

Wretched, limp and apologetic, Yates was assisted from the table, and divested of the pink silk gown.

"I am sorry to spoil your amusement"— she stopped, and turned her head toward Warwick as the host, when all at once her eyes met Stanton's.

"Marjorie!" he gasped. "Marjorie, you blessed kid!"

Silently and discreetly the crowd averted its composite face while Stanton kissed Marjorie ecstatically. Warwick looked unhappy.

"Boys," cried Stanton, "this is my sister, all the way from Nebraska to Manhattan to take care of her little brother."

"Mother is here, too," Marjorie explained, blushing at the effusive welcome accorded her. "We had the address of these apartments and you wrote that they were very nice, you know, and that Mr. Warwick lived here"—

"That's Warwick," interposed Stanton. "He's a bully fellow."

Warwick bowed. Suddenly he felt a great, supreme gladness steal over him. She had gray eyes, Stanton's sister from Nebraska.

"So we came right here from the depot, and mother wanted to surprise you by having everything ready. I bought my kimono on the way here, because our trunks haven't come yet, and the boy made a mistake delivering it. We have the apartment just across the hall."

"Boys," cried Stanton, "come on to the apartment across the hall and be introduced. You've got to make us welcome, because we've come to stay."

Decorously and quietly the crowd crossed to the apartment next door. With dignity and beautiful grace they were introduced to Stanton's mother and to Stanton's home, and Stanton knew he was accepted and admitted forever to the "itness of things."

But Warwick sat in a corner watching Marjorie make tea, tea from his teapot, which the Jap servant had brought over, and over the back of her chair hung the pink silk kimono. He was wondering how she would look in it.

"Sugar?" she asked. "One or two, Mr. Warwick?"

"Two," said Warwick, with a half suppressed sigh. "Say, do you know Mar—Miss Stanton, I'm awfully glad you're a brunette, with gray eyes."

"Why?" Marjorie's head bent lower over the teapot. Tea making does require so much careful attention.

"Because," said Warwick, "pink is so becoming to that type."

"And to Mr. Yates' type, too," laughed Marjorie, but her face was flushed as she slipped the pink kimono around her, over her gray traveling suit, and poured the tea a la Japanese for the crowd, and for Warwick.

Grasshopper Glacier.

One of the small glaciers in Montana is of special interest on account of the fact that in the mass of ice there are imbedded two strata of grasshoppers, each about a foot thick. There are literally tons of grasshoppers in the ice, and the question naturally arises as to where they came from. The most obvious explanation is that centuries ago two enormous swarms in course of migration were caught in a snowstorm, chilled and buried in the snow, where they have remained till now in a perfect state of preservation. In the accounts of the early western explorers a few instances are related of meeting large swarms of locusts on the mountain tops in the Rockies. It is a very fortunate circumstance that the great extension of agriculture in the west has broken up the breeding grounds of these insects.—St. Louis Republic.

Historic Wheat.

Experts on the subject of bread grains say that wheat can be traced back into the dim past across the line marked by the advent of historic man into the dim shades of the stone age. It has been known in Egypt and in the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris since the time when history "runneth not to the contrary." The prehistoric races which formerly lived in the famous "lake dwellings," which were built on platforms supported by piles driven in the lakes of Switzerland, had their mealing stones, wheat mortars, sickles and other grain harvesting and flourmaking apparatus at least 4,000 years ago. Wheat found in ancient Egyptian tombs and in the ruins of the lake dwellings referred to is identical with that which we use today

An Expensive Burial Ground.

Burial in Westminster abbey is an expensive honor, although the sums exacted are considerably less than they were up to the middle of the last century. The fees for interment are arranged on the following scale: To the Fabric fund, £26, £36 or £46, according to the degree of the person to be buried. Other fees to dean, canons, choir, officers, verger, etc., £34 2s. 2d. In lieu of scarves, etc., for choir, etc., £31 2s. 3d., making altogether £91 4s. 8d., £101 4s. 8d. or £111 4s. 8d., according to degree. Formerly the fees amounted to £150 or £160, besides the scarves, hatbands and gloves charged in the undertaker's bill.

A Natural Conclusion.

A little New York girl, whose brief experience of life was confined to existence in an apartment house, was visiting in Philadelphia not long ago. One afternoon, to amuse the child, her cousin showed her a number of photographs and views, meanwhile explaining and answering questions concerning them. One of them was a picture of Windsor castle, which, she was told, was the residence of the late Queen Victoria. After looking at it a moment she innocently inquired, "What floor did she live on?"—Lippincott's.

Laid His Fortune at Her Feet.

"He done tol' me," said Miss Daphne Dalrymple, "dat if I would marry him he'd lay his fortune at my feet."

"An' did he do it?" asked Miss Miami Brown.

"Yas, he sho' did. It took his las' cent to pay foh fohteen yahds of ingrain cyarpet."—Washington Star.

Still Free.

Miss Gaussip—I understand that you are as good as married to Miss Roxley. Mr. Bacheller—Just as good and even better. I'm not going to be married to anybody.—Philadelphia Ledger.

To equal a predecessor one must have twice his worth.—Gracian.

The Rattler's Call.

"What is the rattlesnake's rattle for?" asked the zoo keeper.

"It is a call," he resumed, answering his own question. "The rattlesnake with it calls his mate. A man was telling me the other day that he studied the rattle question last year in the west. He said it is mainly as a call that the rattle is used, though different sounds can be made with it, and these sounds appear to have different meanings.

"Once this man saw seven hogs attack a rattlesnake. The reptile began to fight pluckily, and while he fought he rattled loud and long. Three other snakes came with great speed and courage to his aid. A dreadful battle followed. The snakes, though they fought well, were all killed.

"The rattle is also said to charm or hypnotize birds, so that the snake can seize them easily, but in this story my friend doesn't take much stock. It's as a call, he says, that the rattle is used most—a love call generally, with which the male snake summons his mate."—Philadelphia Record.

A Bold Step.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits, and made them Remedies of Known Composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or billiousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it, in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same. From this little book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, over-worked, "run-down," nervous and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago, by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their squaws. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was known to the Indians as "Squaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable native, medicinal plants was gained from the Indians.

As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retorversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

A Vicious Amendment To State Constitution.

A number of amendments to our State Constitution will be submitted to the voters at the general election on November 6th. Some of these amendments are vicious and should be defeated. These are so cloaked in obscurity as to their real purpose that even the most intelligent of voters will not know whether he is casting his ballot for a good or a bad measure. This being the case it were well for him to vote "No" on all such amendments on the assumption that there is a "little joker" hidden away somewhere in their provisions to deceive him. One of these latter is Senate constitutional amendment No. 20, adopted by the Legislature of 1905, which reads as follows:

"Section Seven of Article Twelve of the Constitution is hereby amended so as to read as follows: Section 7. The franchise or charter of any corporation now or hereafter existing under the laws of this State, may be extended, at any time prior to the expiration of its corporate existence, for a period of not exceeding fifty years from the date of such extension, by the vote or written consent of stockholders representing two-thirds of its capital stock, or by two-thirds of the members thereof."

The object of this proposed amendment is to make the life of corporations perpetual, which is inimical to the interests of the people but good law for the corporations. Among other reasons why this measure should not be approved by the votes of the people of California, is its purpose to endow corporations with privileges foreign to the intent of the laws governing corporations. It would deprive the State of the fees for re-incorporating, and thus wipe out a source of considerable income to the State, raising the tax in proportion to the loss, and placing the burden on the taxpayers.

The viciousness of this amendment has been easily discovered and exposed in time to warn voters, but there are others equally as bad to be voted upon where the "nigger in the fence" is not so apparent. Therefore, the voter will make no mistake in giving his disapproval to all the doubtful amendments to our State constitution, of which some fourteen—good, bad and indifferent—will be submitted to him on the general election ballot.

Judge Burnett in Humboldt County.

[Humboldt Standard.]

The voters of Humboldt county may account themselves highly favored that so busy a man as Judge Burnett of Sonoma county has found time in the stress of the present campaign to spend a short time among us and make a few addresses on the issues of the day. He has since his arrival here made hosts of friends. No one listening to his clear, forcible way of talking can question the gentleman's ability. He is a man of just such strength of character as should entitle him to a seat in the Court of Appeal. His judicial record has been very high. He is entitled to receive the solid vote of this county and when he returns to his home again he may rest assured that old Humbnldt will stand by him in the present campaign.

Poor old earthquake-shaken, fire-devastated and plundered San Francisco has met with another misfortune and is now utterly in the grasp of the gaspipe men, thieves and grafters. Abe Ruef, the representative of all that is vile in the metropolis, is now usurping the functions of District Attorney Langdon's office, to the end that all the guilty may escape. On Thursday Mr. Langdon was illegally deprived of his office by a Board of Supervisors whose corruption was being brought to light by that fearless prosecutor, and to add to the nefarious scheme Abe Reuf was put in forcible possession of an office that just at this time needs an incorruptible and fearless man at its head to protect the lives and property of the people of San Francisco. This overt act on the part of a corrupt administration will without a doubt react on the municipal grafters and the lawless element. A day of reckoning is bound to come.

Danger From The Plague.

There's grave danger from the plague of Coughs and Colds that are so prevalent, unless you take Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, Coughs and Colds. Mrs. Geo. Walls, of Forest City, Me., writes: "It's a Godsend to people living in climates where coughs and colds prevail. I find it quickly ends them. COUNTY DEMOCRATS TO BE HERE MONDAY

Nominees Will Hold Forth at Union Hall and Make their Bow to Our People.

The Democratic County and Legislative nominees will make their bow to the people of Sonoma and vicinity at Union Hall next Monday evening. The meeting, aside from the Legislative nominees, will be essentially a non-political one. Of course, Democrats as well as Republicans will support their party nominees on the State ticket or for Legislative honors, or at least they ought to, as a principle is involved in voting for such nominees. As to the county offices to be filled, that is a different matter. Fitness for the position each candidate seeks, it matters not to the voter and taxpayer whether he be a Democrat or Republican, is what counts in the selection of men to fill the various county offices. This being so we would advise our people, regardless of party affiliations, to attend the meeting and size up the nominees, a number of whom have served the people and made such good records that they are deserving of re-election, particularly is this so of Miss Coulter, Fred. L Wright, Frank E. Dowd, Jos. B. Small and Joe Ryan. the two latter being our local justice of the peace and constable.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CANDIDATES IN TOWN

Their Meeting and Greeting Last Night a Great Success.

The Republican Legislative and County nominees held forth in Union Hall last night. The meeting was largely attended and the candidates were enthusiastically received.

The meeting is in progress as we go to press, therefore a full account account cannot be given in these columns until our next issue comes out.

For County Treasurer

Glenn E. Murdock, the Republican nominee for County Treasurer, has held the office one term and as he has made a most capable official is entitled to another term. During his incumbency he has saved Sonoma county large sums of money in looking after the interests of the taxpayers. Mr. Murdock is well and favorably known to the people of Sonoma, having resided here for a number of years. If you cast a vote for him you make no mistake.

LARGELY ATTENDED AND WELL PATRONIZED.

Ladies' Aid Society's Entainment Big Success.

The entertainment given at Union Hall last Wednesday evening by the Ladies' Aid Society for the benefit of the Congregational Church was largely attended and liberally patronized. "The Old Maids' Convention" made a great hit and was the feature of the evening's entertainment.

The coffee, ice cream and candy stands and the booths of fancy articles did a flourishing business and the ladies netted a neat sum for the church, which was increased by the rummage sale which took place the following morning.

This entertainment was one of the most successful ever conducted here by the Ladies' Aid Society.

Boxing Contest

The satchel with its contents was forwarded by express by the finder to its owner, who acknowledged her gratitude by sending Mr. Beretta a $5 gold note.

MARRIED IN SAINT VINCENT'S CHURCH.

Miss Elmira Filippini and Mr. V. De Carli Join Hearts and Hands.

Miss Elmira M. Filippini, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Filippini, old residents of this valley, was married to Mr. Victor De Carli, last Wednesday, in Petaluma. The wedding took place at high noon in St. Vincent's church, and was largely attended by relatives and friends of the contracting parties. Rev. Father J. J. Dollard tied the nuptial knot.

The bride, who is a charming and pretty girl, wore a gown of white Henrietta cloth. There were no attendants. After the ceremony the bridal couple were driven to the home of the bride's parents, where a wedding reception followed. The home was a perfect bower of chrysanthemus, roses, ferns and smilax. The bridal couple entered the parlors to the strains of "King of the Forest" wedding march, rendered by Misses Vivian Filippini and Loretta McNamara, and a wedding breakfast followed. Eighty-five invitations had been issued and the young couple were the recipients of many useful and beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. De Carli departed on the afternoon train for the south, where they will spend their honeymoon. On their return they will reside at Nicasio on the dairy farm of the groom.

The groom is well-known and well-liked in Petaluma, having been employed for a number of years in Kahn's grocery store in that city, but who recently gave up his position to engage in farming.

Squire Coulter Passes Away

Squire Coulter, father of Miss Minnie Coulter, nominee for School Superintendent of this county, died at his home in Santa Rosa on Thursday afternoon last after a lingering illness. He located in that city fifty-seven years ago and during that long period he has always enjoyed the almost universal respect and esteem of the people of Sonoma county.

He was a Kentuckian and aged 77 years.

PIONEER OF EARLY DAYS PASSES AWAY.

G. H. H. Cornelius, Who Has Held Many Positions of Public Trust, is Dead.

Geo. H. H. Cornelius, a pioneer resident of this city, passed away at his home here Wednesday afternoon. The deceased had been gradually failing in health for a number of years and his death was not entirely unexpected.

Mr. Cornelius came to this valley it the early days and for nearly fifty years was a resident of this city. During that period he has held many positions of public trust in Sonoma. He has been City Trustee, Treasurer and Recorder at various times and always enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens. He was an Odd Fellow in good standing, having joined Sonoma Lodge, No. 28, over thirty-five years ago. TENNY'S WIDOW LAYS CLAIM TO ESTATE.

It is Valued at $5300—Letters of Administration to be Granted Her

Mrs. Beatrice Tenny, widow of John M. Tenny, formerly of this place, who was assassinated in Oakland by an unknown man a couple of weeks ago, has applied to the probate court of Alameda county for letters of administration on his estate, which consists of about $300 in bank and a life insurance policy in the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company for $5000.

There is to be a contest for Mrs. Tenny's pretensions to administer the estate, which the law firm of Reed, Black & Reed have been retained to conduct by the public administrator in behalf of the father and mother of murdered Tenny.

It is stated that the principal ground on which a contest will be based is the alleged fact that an interlocutory decree of divorce was obtained by Mrs. Tenny in this county on the ground of desertion and that the decree is on record bearing the date of April 1, 1905.

"It is a permissive matter says one of Mrs. Tenny's counsel, "and the court or the party granted a divorce may have the final decree entered a year from the date of the first decree. Now that Mr Tenny is dead the court cannot enter such a decree and Mrs. Tenny is still the widow of her husband and is entitled by law to administer and inherit his estate."

The parents of Tenny reside in Madison, Wis., and although the contest, if pressed, against the claims of Mrs. Tenny will be predicated on their rights to inherit Tenny's estate, it is understood that the parents are well-to-do and are not in need of financial assistance.

Tenny married his wife while he was collector of customs duties at Juneau, Alaska. She was but 17 years old, but among the other papers she has is a marriage license showing that her mother's consent was given. Tenny was a roving chap and left his young bride after three years of married life. He had been married before and the second marriage was unknown to Tenny's parents. The father of Tenny has now taken a lively interest in the young widow and her child and has sent his nephew, Chas. T. Jackson of the Medosto News, to Oakland to look up the affairs of his murdered son the latter's widow and child.

Fire in El Verano.

A fire broke out in the residence of Mrs. Emma Lord at El Verano Sunday evening about 8 o'clock, but the prompt action of near-by neighbors and volunteer fire-fighters saved the dwelling and most of its contents. The damage is slight and is fully covered by insurance in the Phoenix of Hartford, a dollar for dollar company, of which Chas. Dal Poggetto is the local agent. The cause of the fire was a defective flue. The loss as adjusted was $65.

PHILANTHROPY FEMININE

By CLAUDE PAMARES

Copyright, 1906, by W. R. Caldwell

It could not be said of Miss Hattie Sheffiin, spinster, that at the age of thirty-eight she was a good looking woman. A spinster of that age cannot be expected to be. The most that can be expected is that she will be kind hearted and have a desire to reform the world and elevate the moral standing of humanity generally.

Miss Sheffiin had that desire. In visiting New York city she had many, many times observed hard up looking men who were seemingly drifting into careers of wickedness because there was no one at hand to encourage them and hold out a helping hand. She had often been tempted to address them, but her brother Ben happened to be alongsor she had seen some policeman watching her or the hard up looking man made a sneak as she was about to stop.

It was when Brother Ben went to Europe on business that his sister determined to carry out her long cherished plans. She had the time and the money, and the steamer was hardly clear of Fire island when she was in the city with her trunk and installed in a boarding house where she had been acquainted for a number of years. In confidence she told the landlady of the object of her visit. It was all very well to donate libraries and to endow hospitals and colleges, but when a man was walking the streets of New York with hunger gnawing at his vitals and hope gone out of his heart, of what use were such institutions to him?

"If you don't make a fool of yourself then I don't know how to make hash," replied the practical and level headed landlady, as she remembered the names of a few hard up men of the scores that had taken her in for a few weeks' board since she had been in the boarding house business.

"But how can I make a fool of myself, as you term it?" was asked. "If I speak kindly and encouragingly to some hopeless and penniless man, if I help him to a situation; if I give him the opportunity to earn an honest living once more, where can you criticise?"

"Never you mind. You've got money, and you've got a heart, and I've nothing further to say."

If she had had anything further to say it would have done no good. It wasn't two hours later that Miss Sheffiin set out on her quest. She hadn't far to look. Any one who is seeking a homeless, hopeless man from twenty-five to seventy years of age can find him in upper Broadway at any hour of the day or night. He is there and looking for a good thing.

Miss Sheffiin found one leaning up against the railing in front of a drug store. His face betrayed gloom and his general attitude disconsolation, and as he looked in the bottles in the window he seemed to be wondering which held laudanum and which strychnine. She was about to address him when a plain clothes detective came from the other direction and said to the man:

"Now, then, out of this or I'll run you in."

The hopeless man sighed and moved on wearily. He moved like one hurt and humiliated. He moved down toward the East river, as if he would take a header off the dock and end it all. Miss Sheffiin followed after, and at the corner she overtook him and said:

"You seem to be in trouble, sir, and if I can assist you I shall be glad to do so."

He was a man about thirty years old. He had tin horn gambler and free lunch written all over him, but the old maid's eyes detected no sign. He looked at her for a minute and wondered what sort of a "plant" it was. Then he became conscious that he had struck one of those "good things" he had read about and heard tell of—a female philanthropist. Removing his hat and deepening his hopeless look, he replied:

"Miss, I have been out of work for weeks and weeks, and, so help me heaven, I have had no food for two days. I was thinking of throwing myself under a street car and ending it all."

"How wicked to think of taking your own life!"

"But of what use to live and walk the streets penniless and hungry? Didn't you just see a detective drive me along like a dog?"

"I did, and I felt almost like shooting him. Please follow me to my boarding house and tell me your story."

He followed. He winked at an acquaintance as he followed, and his wink was returned. He ran across the landlady as he entered the house after Miss Sheffiin, and he heaved a sigh of relief as he found her face unfamiliar. At the same time, however, he realized that she was not a philanthropic landlady—not one to be taken in by any ordinary tale of distress.

Sitting in the parlor beside the old maid and working up all the pathos he could, the tin horn man told his tale. It was one that brought tears to her eyes. He was honest enough to plead guilty to embezzling $20 from his employer to bet on the races and penitent enough to say that nothing on the face of the earth ever again should lead him into crooked paths if he could get a new start.

She had been the first and only one to speak a kind word. She had been the first and only one not to condemn him too strongly and to lead him to believe that his crime might be condoned and a new start made. He was told that he should have free room and board until he could look around. Advertisements should be put in the papers to aid him. Miss Sheffiin herself would go to various stores and offices and use her personal influence.

"I wish you joy of him," said the landlady when the arrangements had been completed and the young man had gone out to make his first application.

"Please do not be so hard hearted, Mrs. Thomas," was the reply. "It is a genuine case of distress, if I ever saw one. Imagine an educated, intelligent young man, willing to do anything to earn his way, being compelled to walk around hungry for two days in this great city."

"I can't imagine it."

"But why would he lie to me?"

"Why have a hundred just like him lied to me?"

"I tell you, Mrs. Thomas, that human nature is good if you will only give it a chance. If I hadn't spoken to the young man he would have been dead under the wheels of a car ere this, and I should never have forgiven myself. I shall find him a place and make a man of him once again, and he will be grateful all his days."

During the next four days the tin horn man was looking for a place between meals, and Miss Sheffiin was making personal calls here and there. She met with no luck, but as some of the boarders smelled whisky on Tin Horn they thought he must be doing well.

On the fourth night, after the philanthropist and her subject had had their usual talk and he had shed more tears than usual, he went up to bed at sharp 9 o'clock. He wanted to get an earlier start than usual.

The spinster followed half an hour later. She found her door shut, but unlocked, and as she stepped into the dark room and felt for the matches some one clapped a hand over her mouth and tossed her on to the bed and had her bound hand and foot and gagged with a towel before she understood what was taking place. Then the gas was lit, the door locked, and the tin horn man quietly said:

"If you make a fool of yourself I'll choke the life out of you by way of that scrawny neck of yours."

It was easy to see that she wanted to speak in reply, and for her benefit he explained:

"I'm after those sparklers in your ears and on your fingers and also what cash you have lying around."

With her eyes she protested against this specimen of human ingratitude. He understood and laughed and said:

"You are homely enough to stop a clock, and the idea of your wearing diamonds is absurd. Take a snooze now while I rummage about."

Her trunk was not locked. From it he took $300 in cash and other jewelry. From about her neck he took a long chain and a fine watch. From her ears he took diamond pendants, and from her fingers he roughly pulled her rings. She tried to yell, but the towel muffled her voice. She tried to scratch, but her hands were tied with cords he had provided for the purpose. She tried to kick, but her ankles were lashed fast, and the effort was not a success.

"Take it easy, old gal," laughed Tin Horn. "I thought you had the disposition of a kitten, but I see you are an old cat. Let me see. I have watch, rings, earrings and money. I don't think there is anything else to take away. Your dresses would be no good, because they are last year's style. Yes; I think this is all, and I will now descend by the fire escape and leave you to figure it out. Excuse me while I tie your ankles to the bedpost. I can't have you rolling off and giving the alarm too soon. So long to you, old gal, and don't let this little episode discourage you from reforming the remainder of the world."

They found her after a time, but Miss Sheffiin was no longer a philanthropist. She was simply a very mad old maid.

Surprising Knowledge.

A certain English baronet who had a dense and absolute ignorance of books and past events took a notion to be presented to his king, George III. The baronet lived near a spot where one of the most celebrated battles had been fought during the wars of the roses, but of that fact he had never chanced to hear. His mind was set upon more tangible things. He had no use for information which was not up to date. When he was presented to his sovereign, the king, who had looked him up and was prepared with the right thing to say, remarked graciously, "You come from the scene of a very celebrated battle, I understand, Sir William?"

"Well, your majesty," was the answer, "I did have a round or two with the blacksmith, but I'm very much surprised that your majesty should have heard of it."

Zoroastrian Rites.

Zoroaster enjoined purity of body as well as of soul, and the Avesta prescribes very elaborate ablutions and lustrations to remove any defilement. The greatest pollution is that which arises from contact with anything dead, as death is the creation of Ahriman and his greatest triumph over the power of Ormazd. The code of the Vendidad assigns the "nine nights' ablution" for the purification of persons so polluted. It consists in a series of sprinklings with holy water and other liquid, accompanied by a wearisome amount of ceremonial detail, to exorcise the spirit of defilement. The Greek writer Lucian in one of his humorous dialogues seems to ridicule this purificatory rite when he says that the Magi in nine nights cleansed Pythagoras of all his sins in life.—A. V. Williams Jackson in Century.

WOUNDS, BRUISES AND BURNS

By applying an antiseptic dressing to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, they may be healed without maturation and in about one-third the time required by the old treatment. This is the greatest discovery an triumph of modern surgery. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is anti-septic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness and prevents any danger of blood poisoning. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering such injuries entail.

Trouble for Government Clerks.

"Cougress makes lots of unnecessary trouble for the government clerks," said a veteran employee, "but the worst case I know of occurred some years ago. A certain senator asked the comptroller of the currency to tell him how much stock a certain man had in a national bank. He was informed that such information was regarded as confidential and could not be given out."

"We'll see about that," said the senator, who was plainly disappointed and displeased.

"Several days later he secured the passage of a resolution calling upon the secretary of the treasury to furnish the senate with the names and holdings of the stockholders in all the national banks in the country. He really wanted to know only the interest of one man in a bank, but he knew that he couldn't get a resolution of that kind through the senate, so he included the stockholders in all national banks. It took the entire force of the comptroller's office several weeks to prepare the information, and when it reached the senate nobody paid any attention to it except the author of the resolution, and he merely looked at the mass of papers only long enough to see about the man he was after and then tossed the papers aside. It was an immense lot of work for nothing."—Washington Star.

Act Quickly

Look out for that "rainy day!"

It comes sooner or later for so many—we can't tell to-day who may want on the morrow.

Prepare now while you are able for any misfortune that may overtake you. Don't run any risks.

Here is something that will help you provide for the rainy day—an investment that carries with it unusual benefits and proves its value from the minute you buy the stock.

Smith's Cash Store is well and favorably known all over the West. Its reputation is of the best and in volume of business it is making tremendous strides forward every year. Some five years ago the stock was selling for $5.00 a share. To-day the price is $10 00 a share. These figures demonstrate what a thriving institution is this biggest Mail Order House on the Pacific Coast.

Each share of stock is guaranteed to earn 6 per cent a year. But the greatest benefit is derived by the stockholder from the discounts given to the holders of five or more shares of stock. You can buy anything to eat, use or wear at the same price the goods would cost your local dealers. We call them "Owner's Prices."

Suppose you buy goods that altogether cost $50 at our wholesale rate. If you are a stockholder you get a discount amounting to $2.50, and your bill is only $47.50. The saving you will make in one year in addition to the earnings will in all probability more than cover the investment.

Year after year you will be effecting big savings. But should hard times knock at your door—and you must not be too sure that something of that sort will not happen—think what it will mean to you to be able to buy everything at cost prices. It might be the very thing that would help you to survive the period of distress.

We are increasing the amount of our capital stock. We are telling you about the stock because we think you ought to invest for your own sake. You couldn't buy stock in any other concern that would pay you so well.

It will not be long before the price of the stock is advanced. You know that means there are not many days remaining in which you can take advantage of this great offer.

For your convenience we are printing a coupon which you ought to fill out—it does not obligate you in any way. Send it at once.
